"After decades below the surface they are fragile and have to be handled extremely carefully," said Daniel Puget, a Paris-based spokesman for Taurus International technical consultants to the $2.25 million expedition.

He said they also took new photographs of the wreck — the first since the Titanic was positively identified by a French-American expedition in September 1985. Other spokesmen said they believed 15 objects had been recovered, but declined to give a clear picture pending better radio communications with crews at the site.

The Nautile submarine, using powerful headlamps, inspected first the front of the ship, then the rear about 1,969 feet away," said Mr. Puget. "Visibility at the site over the weekend averaged about 43 feet in fairly murky water which moved at a weak current." During the dive Sunday, a remote-controlled robot took more than 300 photographs of the wreck. The robot is linked to the submarine by a 230-foot (77-meter) cord and can maneuver inside sections of the ship that would otherwise be too dangerous or difficult to enter. Scientists from the 1985 expedition had decided not to salvage any relics out of respect for the dead.

BEIRUT - In the first seaborne attack along the Lebanese shore since the 1982 Israeli invasion, Israeli commandos killed seven Sunni Moslem Lebanese militiamen mistaken for Palestinian guerrillas, security officials said Monday in the port city of Sidon.

Fighters of the Nasserite Popular Liberation Army clashed with Israeli soldiers who landed from boats late Sunday night on a coast-al road south of Sidon. The Israelis hid behind mounds of sand near the road.

As a Lebanese jeep turned around in an empty lot near the sand piles, Israeli commandos fired two anti-tank missiles at it. When another vehicle followed, the Israelis fired again, advancing from the road and triggering a 15-minute battle. Seven Lebanese militiamen were killed and four were wounded but there were no Israeli casualties, according to reports from Tel Aviv. Israeli helicopter gunships dropped orange flares as the Israeli commandos retreated toward the shore and then departed. Usually patrolled by Palestinian guerrillas based about half a mile (nearly a kilometer) from the seafront, the stretch of shore now is policed by Lebanese Sunni militia-

Eight years after the world's most populous nation put into effect its family planning program that limited most couples to one child, one of the most conspicnous results has been the rise of a generation of "little emperors," what in the West would be known as spoiled brats.

The official press is full of stories about such children. Last year, the newspaper China Youth News published a 12part series titled "The Little Suns in Our Lives," which painted some disturbing portraits.

The parents of one third-grade boy, for example, bought him whatever he wanted. He dined on meat pies; his parents ate porridge. He spurmed clothing that had been worn once. ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast - A secret airlift of American arms to Angolan guerrillas continues through southern Zaire, two Westem diplomats stationed in Zaire said Sunday.

One of the diplomats said that the flights were as frequent as four to five a week

The arms are flown from Kin-shasa's international airport in a C-141 cargo plane marked "Santa Lucia Airways" to an abandoned Belgian air base near Kamina, in Zaire's Shaba Province, he said, From there, a light blue C-130 cargo plane shuttles the weapons to areas in Angola, the diplomat said.

A team of Americans, led by a colonel, coordinates the operation in Kamina, the diplomat said. To cope with central Africa's heat, the Americans have built a small swimming pool at the base, he added.

Also at the base is a detachment of about 12 guerrillas of the Na-tional Union for the Total Inde-Unital Union for the Ional Inde-pendence of Angola, known as UNITA, he said. The rebels, led by Jonas Savimbi, are fighting to over-turn Angola's Marxist government. President Mobuta Sese Seko of

Evidence Suggests That Black Holes Make Up the Hearts of All Galaxies

By James Gleick

NEW YORK - Immense concentrations of mass that appear to be black holes, each with the gravity of 10 million to 100 million suns. have been detected at the cores of the two spiral galaxies closest to Farth's, astronomers announced.

The discoveries, based on observations from the 200-inch (512centimeter) telescope at the Palomar Observatory in California and on complex computer calculations. suggest that such supermassive black holes — collapsed stars may be ubiquitous, forming the hearts of virtually all galaxies.

"It gives a picture that these are a natural feature of the evolution of galaxies," said one of the astronomers, Alan Dressler, of the Carnegie Institution. "We didn't have to look very far to find them." At the same time, a Canadian astronomer said independently that data from a telescope on Mauna Kea in Hawaii indicates the presence of black holes in three other galaxies. The largest black hole, he said, appears to be a billion times as massive as the sun. For scientists trying to understand the evolution of the universe and the formation of galaxies, the findings tie together some of the most bizarre of astronomical objects. They provide the firmest evidence yet for a theory that links ordinary galaxies to the fate of qua-sars, brilliant and mysterious beacons of radiation in the distant sky.

According to this theory, quasars are the cores of galaxies in their early stages and black holes are the engines that drive quasars with such spectacular energy. When a quasar ages and dies out, a black hole remains in the center of the galaxy.

Black holes are the ultimate product of gravitational collapse — matter packed so densely that even light cannot escape its pull. The Mrs. Dukakis steered clear, how-concept began as pure theory, an ever, of her recent revelation that unavoidable consequence of Einstein's physics, and even now their existence has never been definitively established.

Small black holes are believed by many astrophysicists to have been "observed" as the invisible partner in binary systems, where a star revolves around some other unseen, massive object. And some astronomers have speculated that super-massive black holes are present in so-called active galaxies, whose cores seethe with hot, violent nuclear activity. Fewer scientists, however, expected them to be found in ordinary galaxies like Earth's neighbors, Andromeda and M32.

May to have been less than a wonderful month for the United States. But the cess are lacking. The United States is international currency markets, after a hiccup, shrugged off this interruption of a West Germany and Japan, along with mildly encouraging trend. Monthly movements are notoriously erratic, and markets do well to ignore them.

Nonetheless, markets are unlikely to favor the dollar for long unless Middle East disturbances force the price of oil up sharply - in which case all bets are off. The trade deficit that the United States is slowly reducing is still huge; the Reagan administration discounted for too long the warnings of respected observers that the economy was on a perilous path. Without a radical change in policies, the U.S. deficit is unlikely to shrink much this year or next, and by the end of 1988 America will be vastly indebted. Servicing this debt will only compound the strains on the foreign balance.

The policies needed to make a clear indentation in America's trade problem are still only partly in place, and other necessary changes are unlikely to be made soon. On the positive side, the dollar has been devalued substantially, increasing the ability of American producers to export and to compete against imports, and shrinking the incentives to other producers to exploit the American market. And despite loose criticism, interest rates have been kept much higher in the United States than elsewhere, thus helping America to attract the foreign capital needed if its trade deficit is not to cause a further, cataclysmic fall of

The latest foreign trade figures show the dollar, leading to high inflation. But the other major conditions for sucspending much more than it earns, while newly industrializing countries such as South Korea, are earning more than they spend. Saving is too low in America and too high in the creditor countries.

Individual Americans cannot quickly be persuaded to save more, so Washington's only course is to reduce the "dis-saving" of the government --- the federal budget deficit. The Treasury secretary, James Baker, sees a favorable movement this year, but one heavily influenced by nonrecurrent factors. The bipartisan Congressional Budget Office predicts rising deficits. if nothing is done, in 1988 and 1989, with a red hoie far too big for the United States to be able to balance its books.

It is equally unlikely, and undesirable in the long run, that West Germans and Japanese can be induced to cut their savings. Bonn and Tokyo will have to adjust accounts to rebalance their economies.

The symmetrical nature of the problem is underlined by the Bank for International Settlements, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development and the head of the World Bank; none of these is noted for extravagant recipes. Since all governments want to end the present imbalances, there should be room for a deal. Unfortunately, each government insists that only its neighbors should move - a shortsighted attempt to square the circle rather than close it. INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE.

A Lasting 'North Effect'?

ministration's policy toward Nicaragua, and about 25 percent in favor - that has been roughly the public opinion scorecard for years. Now, after the emotional pleas of Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North, there has been an evening out. It is probably a blip. But what if the surge in support for the Nicaraguan rebels holds?

The short answer is that sustained support would help President Reagan's policy in Congress and in Central America. But that is only a necessary and far from sufficient condition for his aim of toppling the Sandinist government. Indeed, the illusion that capturing Capitol Hill is tantamount to taking Nicaragua is perhaps the central fallacy in the case for the contras so glibly spun by Colonel North.

Despite his performance, a New York Times-CBS News Poll found 51 percent of respondents still opposing aid to the contras, and 35 percent approving, right after hearing Colonel North. His partisans prefer to cite other surveys that show Americans almost evenly split. "The polls now suggest that the American people are waking up to the threat of a communist power grab in said Friday. What polls cannot measure is the depth and stability of the new backing for the contras - especially when, as the Times survey found, only 32 percent even now were able correctly to locate Nicaragua as part of Central or Latin America.

Mr. Reagan's inability to arouse real backing over Nicaragua is among his most striking failures as Great Communicator. Majorities have consistently opposed aiding the contras, which explains and justifies the anxious ambivalence of Congress. "A large number of Americans see the Sandinistas as a very unfortunate government," notes Senator Richard Lugar, a key supporter of contra aid. "What hasn't ielled vet." he adds. "is any enthusiasm for the contras as the remedy. This lack of approval has underscored the truth of Henry Kissinger's axiom, that domestic support is the acid test of a successful foreign policy in a democracy. Only in the short term will even a popular president get the benefit of doubt on risky ventures.

Suppose, however, that the missing support has finally turned up, then what? It could tilt a close vote in Congress to the contras, and give the rebels a propaganda boost. The Sandinists do care about American opinion as well, and they might think twice about tightening repressive screws. But otherwise, there is little reason for believing anything dramatic would happen.

Indeed, obsession with North American opinion has been the curse of the contra cause. Its leaders spend more time in Miami and parts north courting Americans than in the camps. This only bolsters the notion that the contras should most want to dispel - that they are the creatures and creation of the United States.

Smack in the middle of Colonel North's testimony, the contras proclaimed yet another great offensive, only to be swiftly beaten back, leaving a pile of civilian dead. By contrast, El Salvador's leftist rebels have for years ruled at least a third of the country, despite battering attacks of a tough, U.S. armed and trained Salvadoran Army.

After six years, the contras have yet to capture a single village, and persist in kill-ing the very civilians whose support is vital. That is what matters in Nicaragua, far more than Colonel North's sanitized version of the war, or polls showing the contras moving up on the charts, at least this week. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Secretary Baldrige

Malcolm Baldrige was one of those rare public people who have - and retain - a set of strong private values and interests while they are at the top of government, a man who had an individual identity that could not be swayed or otherwise affected by the glories of office. He died while pursuing one of his beloved avocations: rodeo riding. Another abiding interest was the protection of the besieged English language against the advancing hordes of the bureaucracy. It was Mr. Baldrige's brilliant idea, which he put into practice, to rig word processors at the Department of Commerce to prevent the continued use of "input," "effectuate" and all the rest of that wellknown gobbledygook. What we are saying is that he was a very special guy.

As secretary of commerce, he served in a time when American industry and its place in the world were changing with great speed. An experienced corporate manager, he made himself a force for pragmatism in an administration in which the prevailing economic ideas were highly ideological.

He was one of the first people in the administration to recognize the dramatic rise of the dollar, from 1982 to 1985, as a threat to American business. He took vigorous issue with the inane view that the overpriced dollar was a kind of homage the world was paying to the United States.

As American exports strangled on the dollar's exchange rate, and imports soared, Mr. Baldrige tried to strike a balance between endangered American industries shricking for protection and the doctrinaire free-traders elsewhere in the administration. Accused of being a protectionist, he always retorted that he was defending the distinction between free trade and fair trade, a position that has now become popular with both parties in Congress.

One of the great policy battles in the Reagan administration has been — and is being - fought over export controls. The Department of Defense, citing national security, has tried to prohibit foreign sales of an extremely wide range of American products, sometimes including items that are readily available from American companies' foreign competitors. Mr. Baldrige and the Commerce Department have contended that the United States is a trading nation that must live by its exports - now more than ever, because of its mounting foreign debts — and controls have to be limited to the short list of exports that are genuinely crucial. Mr. Baldrige also seemed to be winning that one.

He had only disdain for the kind of financial manipulation to which many American companies and their owners have turned in the 1980s in their efforts to get rich. He was one of the few people in the administration who spoke with real knowledge of the importance of performance on the factory floor, and the necessity of strengthening U.S. manufacturing. He knew that America's prosperity and strength depend ultimately on the skill and quality of its manufacturing. That was probably the public issue about which he felt most strongly at the time of his death.

The U.S. Role in Seoul's Reversal: Congratulations Are Not in Order

By Selig S. Harrison

WASHINGTON — On July 9, just before the columnist Charles Krauthammer congratulated the Reagan administration for its role in the South Korean political crisis (IHT, July 15), demonstrators pulled down the American flag and burned it on the balcony of a leading Seoul hotel amid "wild applause" and "a roar of approval among the hundreds of thousands of protesters," according to a report in The New York Times.

This deeply disturbing event took place because the United States has consistently supported succes-sive South Korean military regimes for the past 26 years in their repression of a rising opposition movement. Yet Mr. Krauthammer cites South Korea, among other cases, to prove that the Reagan administration has made the promotion of democracy "central to American policy" in the Third World. He gives the administration more credit than it deserves for the eleventh-hour change in its Korea policy. The United States had enthusiastically embraced Chun Doo Hwan since he took power in 1980. The administration shifted ground only after the popular upsurge in the streets had forced a showdown in the Seoul regime between moderates and hard-liners and only after congressional pres-sures had begun to build in Washington. The former U.S. ambassador, Richard Walker, who shunned opposition contacts during his five years in Seoul, repeatedly attempted to whitewash President Chun's rigged electoral laws. Shortly before his departure, he said that National Assembly elections had been "generally free and fair."

Visiting Seoul in May 1986, Secretary of State
George Shultz refused to meet with the opposition leaders Kim Dae Jung and Kim Young Sam. Praising Mr. Chun's plans for a transfer of power under rules sure to leave the military in control, Mr. Shultz made a widely ridiculed observation that "the institutions of democracy are taking shape." He added that he did not see the situation as "volatile in any way." Yet respected analysts called it just that.

On Feb. 6, 1987, the assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, Gaston Signr. signaled a possible shift in U.S. policy by calling for a "more open and legitimate political system." But Mr. Chun had insisted all along that he was moving toward a more open system. Mr. Sigur's cautious criticism, which was not followed up diplomatically, had little impact on Mr. Chun or the Korean public. Mr. Shultz promptly backpedaled, in any case, when he revisited Scoul in March. Once again omitted any reference to the national debate raging in Seoul over the procedure for the succession.

A month after the Shultz visit, Mr. Chen, confident Washington would go along with him, made the April 13 declaration that triggered the crisis. The next president would be chosen under the same easy-to-manipulate electoral college system that he had used to ratify his military coup in 1980; negotiations on constitutional reform would be broken off, and no public discussion of reform would be permit-ted until after the Seoul Olympics next year.

praising Mr. Chun for his decision to retire, he Informed of the impending declaration two days a advance, the administration temporized. Mr. Sigur, testifying before Congress, expressed "disap-pointment." As late as June 17, Mr. Shritz continued to sidestep criticism of Mr. Chun, suggesting the opposition had been unreasonable and shared the me for the ending of constitutional dialogue.

Having helped to precipitate the explosion in the streets, the administration did intervene to block the use of the armed forces in suppressing demonstra-tions. Mr. Reagan's June 19 letter to Mr. Chun and the State Department's public appeal to military commanders June 22 surely played a major role in preventing the imposition of martial law.

On the issue of how far to go in making political concessions, however, it was the ruling party chairman, Roh Tae Woo, and other establishment moderates who recognized that halfway measures would not defuse the crisis...

Symbolic of the administration's pro-Chun posture was its decision to continue giving preferential trade and investment benefits to South Korea despite bipartisan 1984 legislation explicitly prohibiting such preferences for countries that prohibit free labor unions and violate human rights.

Senator Edward Kennedy's bill removing these preferences merely aimed to enforce existing legisla-tion and was an appropriate response to the crisis. It could be attacked for illustrating "a mean-edged partisan style" only by one, like Mr. Krauthammer, who views South Korea through documaire lenses.

It is important to assess the U.S. record in Korea dispassionately, because the road to democratic change is likely to be rocky. Mr. Roh has delivered on one key promise, the restoration of Kim Dae Jung's political rights. But he has not made good on his pledge to release political prisoners. The National Council of Churches in Korea said last to compete fairly for power. He has not agreed to permit labor organizing. And he has shown no permit labor organizing. And he has shown no disposition to restrict the vast secret police apparatus built up during military rule or to modify the National Security Law, on which this apparatus operates. For the United States, the most serious policy challenges in South Korea still lie ahead.

The Danger To Gandhi, And to India

By Mohammed Ayoob

N EW DELHI —Almost halfway through his first elected term as prime minister of India, Rayw Gandhi may be in serious danger of losing control of the shap of state. The ladicontrol of the ship of state. He indi-en press portrays a youthful leader under siege. While this is parily the result of the press's self-assigned role of critic of any government, it is also a reflection of Mr. Gauchi's loss of credibility among India's 100 million strong middle class.

A recent spate of scandals involve ing allegations of kickbacks to pow-erful figures close to the prime minister in connection with arms purchases from Sweden and West Germany, and Mr. Gamilia's peerish reaction to attempts by the former finance and defense minister, V.P. Singh, to uncover information about them, have provided critics with more than enough ammunition to keep the government off balance.

Mr. Gandh's handling of this recit bility crisis has shown him to be an immature leader unused to Indian politics. This was most clearly demonstrated by his treatment of Mr. Singh, National Council of Churches in Korea same have yet to be freed, many of them leading activists who would play a major role in a free election campaign.

Mr. Roh has not made clear whether he is prepared for meaningful constitutional and electronal law reforms that would enable the opposition deal with West Germany.

His removal gave the impression that Mr. Gandhi had a vested interest in not allowing the inquiry to proceed. And by expelling Mr. Singh from the ruling Congress (I) Party earlier this month, Mr. Gandhi freed him from the last vestiges of party discipline and provided the disunited opposition with a focal point around which to coalesce. Aside from Mr. Gandhi's declining political image, India faces a set of more fundamental problems as it approaches the 40th anniversary of its independence. They include escalating communal violence. Sikh terrorism and the serious decline of Mr. Gandhi's party as a functioning political organization.

 $\underline{x} : \underline{x}$

Recent outbreaks of rioting between Hindus and Moslems, espe-cially in northern India, the Hindu heartland, have demonstrated an unprecodented degree of advance planning and organization. They also have led to allegations of connivance at, and participation in, acts of communal carnage by the provincial constabulary.

These nots are related partly to the greater self-assertion of a younger generation of Indian Moslems free from guilt of involvement in the 1947 partition of the subcontinent. But a more important factor is the increasing psychological insecurity of a majority Hindu community that feels itself under attack from religious and national minority groups. Hindu fears of a further cutting up of the motherland. The central government's vacillation on the issue has only made matters worse and played into the hands of Sikh extremists on the one hand and Hindu chanvinists on the other. Mr. Gandhi lost his best chance of isolating Sikh terrorists when, following state elections in Punjab in 1985 and the victory of the moderate faction of the Sikh party, the Akali Dal, he delayed the transfer of Chandigarh city to Punjah despite the Sikhs' demands. This reduced the cred-ibility of moderate Akalis and the central government among many Sikhs. The overwhelming majority of Sikhs either oppose the campaign for an independent Sikh state or are con-vinced of its futility. But their lack of faith in Mr. Gandhi's government has prevented them from countering effectively the propaganda and violence of the extremists.

The greatest harm done to the Indian polity by Mr. Gandhi and his mother before him has been the decimation of the Congress (I) Party.
With no party elections held in almost two decades and state branches run by the center's nominees, the pardemocratic experiment in a very hazardous socioeconomic environment.

A robust democratic party of parties at the national level can still contain the dangers of communal polarization and extremist terrorism could potentially divide the country. enough and strong enough to do so, But for such a political organization he will go down in history as the 10 emerge, the leader must be dependent dent on the party for his or her political survival, and not vice versa.

Listening to Him Testify, the Colonel Frightened Me When the tin dram of authority now By Michael Norman

The former sleep in mental wards or seek the quiet of the woods. They still have hollow eyes, "the 2,000yard stare," as it was called in World War II. Sometimes these haunted take their own lives. Three years after World War I, Lieutenant Colonel Charles White Whittlesey, in New York's famed 77th Division. boarded the steamer Toloa, bound for Cuba, and that night threw himself over the rail.

Colonel Whittlesey, commander of the so-called Lost Battalion, led a unit of 554 men into a trap. The unit fought valiantly and the colonel won the Congressional Medal of Honor, but only 154 of his com-rades walked away from that battle. No one knows why the commander later killed himself. Perhaps he had only one answer for the wanton slaughter that is war.

Men who have not seen enough combat, on the other hand, come home belligerent. They may have had several tours of battle and even been wounded - as was Colonel North, twice - but somehow the fighting did not sober them. Perhaps they still need to perform some a Manhattan lawyer and an officer great deed, still need to prove themselves. Or perhaps they had faltered in their first action and want another chance to wipe away the shame. Most, I suspect, are just plain angry. They have spent years choking on the excess animus of a defeat. They survived Vietnam but are still full of fight. Oliver North reminds me of men like this, men who have seen corpses stacked like cordwood on the fender of a tank and years later still shake their sabers. "I honestly believe that any soldier who has ever been to a war truly hopes he will never see one again," the colonel said, then went on to detail how he not only organized an effort to wage another war but violated U.S. laws to fund it. He called the men he served with 'the horrors we lived through." And yet he still proclaimed himself "aclowed orders, "saluted smartly and charged up the hill."

If Anything, North Deserves a Medal

O LIVER North's ordeal makes us think about dishonesty in public affairs. Few would deny that it is sometimes necessary or defensible. Good men do deceive in noble cause. Winston Churchill never told Parliament about Enigma — the decoding machine the Poles stole from the Germans —which gave the Allies access to German secrets during the war. He did not even tell President Franklin Roosevelt.

As D-Day approached, the Allies lied shamelessly to Hitler, persuading him that the landings would take place near Calais; not on the Normandy beaches. All they did was save thousands of Allied lives, and perhaps the invasion. As Chinchill said, the truth was sometimes so important it had to be protected by "a bodygnard of lies." All public people deceive at one time or level or another, even congressmen. Colonel North represents a constitutional problem, but he did not create it. When the tumult and the shouting die, we might properly warn but then bemedal him and give him the field command he deserves. — John Hutchinson, a professor of industrial relations at the University of California at Los Angeles, in The New York Times.

By C.L. Sulzberger

RICHARD Nixon's recollection of Leonid Brezhnev's hope for a cynical deal to carve up the globe gives an interesting insight into the Soviet leader, whose affable personal behavior masked a purely Stalinist conception of foreign policy.

The Soviet leader's idea of world partition, if indeed he was serious, derived basically from two notions. First, there was the fear of China with its huge population and rich resources. Second, there was the demographic concern of a racially white Russia faced with the growth of the Asiatic racial minorities among the Uzbeks, the Tadzhiks, the Turkmen. the Azerbaidzhanis, and others,

The 1973 and 1974 summit meetings improved the personal relationship between Mr. Brezhnev and Mr. Nixon - but little else, Mr. Brezhnev by now clearly realized that Watergate might mean the end of Mr. Nixon's authority. He seemed deliberately to remove himself from the direct line of fire in negotiations.

In November 1973, Mr. Brezhnev concluded a letter to Mr. Nixon with these reassuring words, in light of the Watergate scandal: "We would like, so to say, to wish you in a personal, human way, energy and success in overcoming all sorts of complexities, the causes of which are not too easy to understand at a distance."

The third summit meeting was a washout. There was no longer in the White House a decisive president able either to resist Moscow's expansionist tendencies or to negotiate in earnest. When Mr. Nixon arrived, Mr. Brezhnev met him at the airport have had extended conversations with and soon afterward received him in his Kremlin office. He told the presi-

There he advised Mr. Nixon that he had done all he could to bring peace to the Middle East but feared he could not indefinitely restrain the Arabs from another round on very high terms of intelligence. of war. But a measure of agreement was reached on disarmament. Mr. Nixon clearly took to Mr.

Brezhnev. He seemed to enjoy his little foibles, like a passion for fast driving and his gimmick cigarette holder that rationed him to one smoke an hour (though he cheated electully like a mischievous boy, using a reserve pack.) When the president was driven to the Moscow airport, Mr. Brezhnev climbed in and sat on the jump seat in front of his guest, Mr. Nixon later confessed: "I really think he had a feeling of loss and felt sad that the trip was over." There is no doubt that Mr. Nixon appreciated Mr. Brezhnev's support as the Watergate disaster unfolded.

It is noteworthy that as an expresident, Mr. Nixon visited Moscow in July 1986 and talked at length with Mikhail Gorbachev, of whom he formed a good opinion. He wrote me:
"As you know, Gorbachev is the third general socretary I have met. I had long conversations with Khrushchev in 1959 and with Brezhnev in 1972, 1973 and 1974. In addition, I

I would rate Gorbachev as the ablest. "Khrushchev had the quickest reaction time... Gorbachev is not quite asquick but just as smart as Khrushchev and much smoother. He wants those who talk to him to be convinced of his sincerity and of his reasonableness and invariably is able to make that impression. "Does this mean that, as Margaret Thatcher put it, we can do business with him? The answer is yes, provided we understand what kind of business he is prepared to do with us. The fact that he is better educated, smoother, and appears more reasonable than his predecessors does not mean that he will be easier to deal with but that he will be far more formidable.

and Latin America have been touched, deeply and for the better, by a turnaround in U.S. foreign policy.

"Foreign policy" is just shorthand for how a country sees the world and acts to achieve what it sees as its basic interests. So when there is a turn in the foreign policy of a major power it is obviously a matter of moment. But this change has gone relatively unnoticed in the United States, overshadowed by the Iran-contra trauma. Just the same, it is likely to be the material of history books when people are saying "Admiral Who?" and "Colonel What's-His-Name?"

For almost four decades, the United States could almost always be counted on to give its support to military dictatorships or right-wing civilian tyrannies.

Part of the reason was a fear of communism — often no paranoid mirage. But time after time the United States ignored or shunned the democratic center. It did not so much overestimate communist strength as fatally minimize the desire of the people of a country to rule themselves in freedom:

And many American diplomats and military people found it easier to deal with generals who made themselves presidents than elected presidents who had to cope with pesky democratic procedures. A tragedy of modern American history is that a country that believes so strongly in democracy became associated around the world with support of tyranny.

Just 18 months ago, on a trip to Asia, I visited three dictatorships — South Korea, the Philippines and Indonesia. The saddest part of the trip to me was that people I met took it for granted that my country would support the tyrants against those fight-ing for the political freedoms Amer-

N EW YORK — The lives of milions of people in Asia, the Pacific What is more, the expectation is growing abroad that the United States will probably use its influence against the tyrants in time of crisis, not for them. In the Philippines, the United States finally got around to understanding that Ferdinand Marcos had to go. In South Korea, Washington told the gencrais who have ruled for a quarter of a century that we will not be at all happy if they use arms to put down the revolu-tion for political freedoms. Eighteen months ago in Seoul, I was ashamed of U.S. policy toward South Korea; last week in Seoul I was encouraged by it.

In Panama, we are trying to say goodbye forever to a strange general we once hung with medals. In Haiti, and in a half-dozen countries in Latin America, we have removed our support from dictators or the coup-minded military.

What happened? For one, the Philip-pine street revolution turned out to have wings, as did the American and French revolutions in their time.

Corazon Aquino helped it fly. If she had not been there to channel the desires and anger of the people into a democratic explosion. Mr. Marcos would have lingered on. The chances are that he would have been succeeded in his Manila palace not by a woman in a yellow dress but by a Communist guerrilla leader in jungle combat gear. One day, Mrs. Aquino may have to fight the Communists, but she has bought time for herself and her people.

President Reagan at first would have preferred a Marcos victory. But something was happening in Washington as well as Manila. People stuck their necks out — State Department officials and military men like Admiral William Crowe, the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff. They persoaded Mr. Reagan that the security of U.S. bases in the Philippines, and of the entire American political position in the islands, would be swallowed in chaos and perhaps com-unism if Mr. Marcos stayed. The Philippine revolution flew to South Korea. It has flown to Panama. It will fly wider as the word sinks in that something is happening in Washington aside from televised hearings dealing with sleaze and arrogance. Mr. Reagan and the U.S. secretary of state, George Shuitz, would have been furiously and properly denounced if they had stuck with Mr. Marcos, Mr. Duvalier, the South Korean junta and that Panamanian general.

They did not, and that is part of history and the daily lives of millions of people around to your own way of thinking. The New York Times.

Concerns of a Big Investor

Regarding the report, "Hostile Mega-Bids Are Out of Fashion," (Special Re-port: Mergers and Acquisitions, May 29) by Peter Field:

Why would anyone want to reduce communities and industries rather than make them productive and profitable? Somehow this myth has gotten into place and it is damaging to a very progressive movement in corporate America.

Playthings? I can assure you that after spending several billion dollars, there is only one thing an investor has in mind and that is to make the assets of a company more dynamic than ever before. T. BOONE PICKENS Jr.

Amarillo, Texas. The Larger Trade Problem

Regarding the opinion column "How to Fight for Open Markets Abroad," (July 16) by Richard A. Gephardt:

After having acknowledged that 80 percent of the U.S. trade deficit is America's own fault and the remaining 20 percent attributable to unfair trade practices, Mr. Gephardt then, as he did in writing the Gephardt amendment to the House trade bill, focuses his attention on the smaller rather than on the larger problem.

He makes no reference to the submission by the European Commission of more than 30 unfair U.S. trade practices. Recently, the European Community decided not to go ahead with a tax on oils and fats, the prospect of which had alarmed the American Soybean Associaof South Korea have achieved one of the most notable victories in the long history of man's struggle to be free.

Real Nuclear Proliferation

I agree with the concerns expressed in the July 18 editorials from The New York Times and The Washington Post, that nuclear proliferation is a terrifying prospect. But there is a tendency to see it only in terms of new countries trying to get the bomb (that is, horizontal proliferation), whereas real proliferation is taking place daily in the form of the nuclear arms race, whereby stockpiles are increasing (vertical proliferation) and spreading across the globe (geo-graphical proliferation).

At the Sixth European Nuclear Disarmament Convention held in Coventry, England, in mid-July, more than 1,000 delegates from about 30 countries, East and West, North and South, took part in meetings and seminars on how to influence the political process toward arms control. A key theme was the current Euromissile negotiations. Speakers reminded those at a packed meeting in Coventry Cathedral that as the landbased Euromissiles are withdrawn, the United States is massively increasing geographical proliferation with cruise missiles on aircraft and ships.

As long as the superpowers continue to undermine their own nuclear disarma-ment attempts in this way, they will never be able to persuade Pakistan, India, Israel

Regarding "Women's Colleges Endure U.S.," (June 11) by Fred M. of awfulness, that is. The coughing-casentence compares favorably to the following recent winner in the contest that challenges writers to compose the worst opening sentences for the worst novels never written:

The camel died quite suddenly on the second day, and Selene fretted sulkily and, buffing her already impeccable nails — not for the first time since the journey began — pondered saidely if this would dissolve into a vignette of minor inconveniences like all the other holidays spent with Basil."

The contest is named after the writer who in 1830 published a novel that began, "It was a dark and stormy night..." Bulwer-Lytton's sentence churned on until it coagulated in a de-scription of the wind "fiercely agitating the scanty flame of the lamps." The contest is linguistic vandalism with an academic rationale, literary delinquency with a legitimate purpose. Some sentences submitted are disconcertingly familiar. I have the awful feel-ing I have read a detective novel that began with this Bulwer-Lytton winner: There are things a good detective can feel in his bones, and Dillon Shane knew Jasmine Kimberly Collingsworth did not drown in her sleep on New Year's Eve." And every spy novel I read loses me in a hairpin-turn first sentence like:

"It came to him in a cocaine rush as he took the Langley exit that if Alrich had told Filipov about Hancock only Tulfengian could have known that the photograph which Wagner had shown to Maximov on the jolting S-bahn was and she in James, Vera sits brooding not the photograph of Kessler that at the tea table and stirs a cup of Bradford had found at the dark, sinis- what she expects is execrable Irish ter house in the Schillerstrasse the day that Straub told Percival that the man on the bridge had not been Aksakov Paustovsky, which meant that it was not Kliest but Kruger that Cherensky had met in..." (That is about half the sentence that recently won the Bulwer-Lytton spy-fiction category.)

"During an exuberant rainfall, a languid bottle of salad dressing sat passively on a Formica counter top." Bulwer-Lytton sentences, polished to perfect imperfection, are works of anti-art. They are clogged with metaphors, similes, adjectives and adverbs. able mention to the congressman who The words pile into and crumble onto treats "task" as a verb. one another like (stop me before I

But do not jostle the elderly woman whose lined face is "like a patchwork of meandering rivers strung together over a bed of waffles." Thrill to adventure: "The lovely woman-child Kaa was mercilessly chained to the cruel post of the warrior-chief Beast, with his barbarian tribe now stacking wood at her nubile feet...."
Admit it: You get guilty pleasure from the phrase "nubile feet."

The impresario of the Bulwer-Lytton contest is Scott Rice, a professor of English at San Jose State. Because the contest demands only one sentence, it is, he says, perfect for persons with short-winded muses." Obviously Mr. Rice is having fun, as are the authors of the 10,000 entries. But he has a serious point. He believes that before you can write badly enough to win his contest, you must be a good writer. You must have a feel for how language misfires, how clumsy syntax can swallow thought. His contest is wordplay with a pedagog-ic purpose. If you can figure out what makes things (sentences, painting, foreign policies) awful, perhaps you can reason back to rules of excellence. "Clad in a light summer frock, the mauve print which James gave her when James was still interested in frocks Breakfast, wondering why it is that when one's lovers become one's friends the resulting social discomfiture is im-palpably but inescapably less intriguing than the sequestered malaise which results from the reverse."

As my blushing pen reproduces that sentence, a congressman is asking Rear Admiral John Poindexter if a particular person had been asked to do something in connection with the Irancontra debacle. The congressman asks if the person had been "tasked with the effort." A Bulwer-Lytton dishonor-

Mr. Baker, trying to maneuver between a resurgent Democratic Congress and intransigent administration conservatives, has proved a disappointment to some of his friends in Congress, where he was admired as a conciliatory Senate majority leader during Mr. Reagan's first term.

When Mr. Baker succeeded compromise to reduce the federal budget deficit and maintain a high level of military spending, at the cost of accepting some mild tax increases opposed by the president.

NEW YORK - Prices on the New York Stock Exchange posted modest gains in moderate trading Monday, drawing support from steady bond prices and a firm dollar.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 8.61 to close at 2,493.94. Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 4 to 3 among the 1,993 issues traded. Volume totaled about 152 million shares, down from 158.4 million on Friday. "The market oozed up and won ugly," said Larry Wachtel, analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities. "Hardly anyone is here, the advance doesn't have any real staying power or flair, there's not a lot of conviction, but it still won."

The market's resilience "confounds everyone," he said.
"Bonds are dicey, the dollar has stopped climbing, by all definitions, the market should be going into a correction, and yet it continues to defy that reasoning," he said. Larry Greenwald, co-manager of equity trad-ing at Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., said, "We haven't had a major correction, but there's still a fair amount of skepticism."

Rodd Anderson, vice president in equity rading at Shearson Lehman Brothers, said a Dow retreat to 2,450 this week is likely.

In Vienna, Eager Investors Coming Out of the Woods

By FERDINAND PROTZMAN

7 IENNA - In July and August, the Viennese traditionally desert the city on masse, retreating to summer homes in the Vienna Woods or escaping to Austria's lakes and mountains to beat the heat and the throngs of tourists. But in the midst of the dog days here, the Vienna Stock Exchange is experiencing a surprising, foreign-powered boom that many market experts believe could last through the year.

The rise began in early July after a strong buy recommendation for Austrian stocks from the British brokerage Grieveson, Grant & Co. Trading volume has climbed to one daily record after another, extending the trading session several times and sending prices soaring. The boom has even forced some brokers to delay their sacrosanct vaca-

er er gag

Some brokers have tions.
"The initial spark came had to delay vacations from British institutional investors, then spread to the Dutch and West Germans." to handle the surge in business. said Joachim Kühnert, an economist at Creditanstalt

Bankverein AG, Austria's largest bank. "Now the Austrian investors are climbing aboard, both institutions and small private investors. We've had to install seven new telephone lines to handle all the business."

French, Belgian and American investors have also helped fuel the explosion, which ended a prolonged period of market lethargy. Vienna topped the world's stock exchanges in 1985 with a 130 percent rise, mainly on foreign buying, but the market stagnated in 1986. Then prices fell 18 percent in the first half of 1987 from the year-earlier period, according to exchange officials.

That decline leveled off in June, as stocks drew support from the dollar's relative stability and the enduring boom on the New York Stock Exchange, said Gerhard Grund, the head of the securities department at Genossenschaftliche Zentralbank AG. Share prices have risen 20 percent since the start of July and climbed at an even faster pace in the past week. By Monday, the Creditanstalt Index had risen 17.4 percent, to 218.11, since July 1.

OLUME HAS also soared. The latest daily volume record of 283 million Austrian schillings ($22 million) was set last Wednesday, breaking the mark of 212.6 million schillings set July 17. The session, which normally ends at 1:00 P.M., was extended 45 minutes Wednesday to cope with the flood of orders. "It's astonishing when you consider that daily volume averaged about 12.5 million schillings in June, and was as low as 2 million schillings on some days in the winter," said Mr. Grund.

Why the sudden interest in what remains one of the world's secondary markets? Stefan Handl, the head of Citibank (Austria) AG, said several fundamental economic factors "make investment in Austria well-considered," including social and currency stability and the government's moves to liberalize the markets. Gross national product is expected to grow only I percent this year, after 1.7 percent in 1986, but analysts said the private industrial and service sectors offer attractive opportunities The situation of the country's economy as a whole is better than the negative publicity we've enjoyed recently," said Mr. Kühnert, referring to the woes of Austria's state-owned heavy industries, which continue to chalk up massive losses. Perlmooser AG, a construction company, was a nearly unanimous pick by analysts. Despite fierce international competition, its 1986 profit rose to 76.5 million schillings from 44.3 million in 1985, and further improvement is expected this year. Shares rose to 760 schillings Monday from 693 schillings July 3.

The chemical concern Lenzing AG and paper-producer Leykam AG are also favorites, along with banks, where analysts said

Creditanstalt tops the list. The brewery sector is also popular.

But Mr. Handl of Citibank cited the need for caution. "The relative thinness of the market and liquidity must be kept in mind," he said. "If you purchase a half-million dollars of some Austrian stocks, you can move the market 5 percent. To an unwary investor, that can look like there is broad support when there really is not."

Spending In U.S.

Outpaces Rise In June Income

WASHINGTON - U.S. consumer spending jumped 0.7 percent in June, the largest spending gain since April, although Americans' personal incomes rose only 0.4 percent, the Commerce Department

The spending increase followed a 0.1 percent decline in May and a 0.8 percent climb in April, while the income rise followed revised 0.5 percent increases in those months. The income revisions, from rises of 0.2 percent in May and 0.4 percent in April, were made in con-junction with the department's annual recalculation of gross national product figures.

Personal consumption spending. which includes virtually everything except interest payments on debt increased at an annual rate of $20.4 billion in June following a decline of $3.8 billion in May.

Purchases of durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, increased $9.8 billion in June, reversing a $7.8 billion May decline in May. The swings were attributed to auto purchases.

Purchases of nondurable goods fell at an annual rate of $2.9 billion, the second monthly decrease, while service purchases were rising at an annual rate of $13.6 billion from $5.9 billion last year.

The June and May increases in personal incomes were affected by large increases in retroactive payments for Social Security benefits. which inflated the May advance, and in government subsidy payments to farmers in both months

Americans' disposable, or after-tax, income edged down 0.1 per-cent in June after rising a record 3.6 percent in May. The May increase, wever, was merely a return to more normal levels after large tax payments in April.

Meanwhile, sales of existing single-family homes, hurt by a jump in mortgage rates this spring, fell 6.1 percent in June, the biggest decline since a 14.3 percent drop in January, the National Association of

The fuel-efficient Tropicale cruise ship helped make Carnival the industry leader.

Top U.S. Cruise Line Floats Shares But Some Analysts See Snags in Carnival's Offering

By Kurt Eichenwald

New York Times Service NEW YORK - At a dinner for cruise line executives nine years ago, Ted Arison, then the president of Carnival Craise Lines Inc., made an announce-ment that would help turn the industry around: He was going industry around: rie was going to build a ship.

"It certainly surprised me," one official who attended the dinner said. "People were predicting we had seen the construction of our last cruise ship. It was hard for anyone to believe that you could build a ship that was cost effective. But build Mr. Arison did, and that ship, the fuel-efficient Tropicale, helped to catapult Carnival from a second-tier line to the industry giant, with seven ships serving the Caribbean and coastal resorts of Mexico, another ship under construction and 1986 revenue of $420.8 million.

"Carnival — and The Love Boat' - have made our industry," said Donald L. Caldera, chairman of Bermuda Star Line Inc., a competitor based in Teaneck, New Jersey. 'Love Boat' is a popular television series that was filmed on a cruise ship. Now the family-run Carnival has taken perhaps its biggest step by selling an interest in its busi-ness to the public, After 13 years of operation, the company has offered 18 percent of its shares, to help finance its expansion. Carnival's offering was priced at $15.50. On its first day of trading Friday, it was the most heavily traded stock on the American Stock Exchange, closing at $15.75, up 25 cents from the opening.

Analysts said that the first day disclosed little about the stock's long-term outlook.

The trading activity is in line with what we have seen with many new issues where the size of the offering was quite large, said David S. Leibowitz, senior Carnival has succeeded in large part by focusing on people who have never taken a cruise. Offering short cruises, of seven days or less, at a daily rate of $200 or less, the company has attracted passengers who showed little interest in the luxury segment of the market, where cruises last 10 to 14 days at a daily cost of $250 or more.

To reach the mass market something not yet accomplished on a similar scale by other lines, Carnival has used national tele vision advertisements featuring songs about its "Fun Ships." With its success, industry observers and executives say. Carnival has helped to popularize the cruise line business. In 1970, approximately half a million North American passengers took cruises, according to the Cruise Lines International Association, an industry trade group. That number reached an estimated 2.1 million in 1986 and is expected

Goldsmith Sells CGE a Stake in Media, Retailer

OKB. World's largest bank

d'Electricité, the French electrical est publishing group, after a bitter engineering and telecommunications concern, said Monday it had bought most of Sir James Goldsmith's large minority holding in Generale Occidentale, the French media and retailing group that the Anglo-French financier founded.

The sale, which some analysts estimated would bring Sir James 1 billion French francs ($162 million), baffled the financial community and left analysts wondering if Sir James was pulling out of France, or merely regrouping his assets for another try at creating a communications empire. Générale Occidentale confirmed that Sir James and General Oriental Investments Ltd., another company he controls, had sold to CGE his 51 percent ownership in Trocadéro Participations. Trocadero, a holding company, controls 34 per-cent of Générale Occidentale's stock and is its main shareholder. CGE, which already had 49 percent of Trocadero, now becomes Générale Occidentale's controlling

Sir James, who retains "less than 5 percent" of Générale Occidentale stock, will remain as chairman of the company, said Gilberte Beaux, administrator-general manager and the company's No. 2 executive. "it's a financial transaction that does not affect the assets, activities or strategies of Générale Occidentale," Mrs. Beaux said. All calls to Sir James were being routed to Mrs. Beaux. Générale Occidentale, which reported 1986 revenue of 18.87 biltion francs, controls the Grand Union supermarket chain in the United States and a media operation in France headed by the weekly news magazine, L'Express.

Industry analysts were surprised by Sir James's move.

"I haven't a clue what's going on," said Susanna Hardy, who covers Générale Occidentale for James Capel & Co. in London. "This is most puzzling thing to come out of France in a long time."

Générale Occidentale's stock on the Bourse recovered from early losses to close unchanged from Friday's 1,185 francs. "There were a lot of buy and sell orders, which reflects the bafflement of the market " Ms Hardy said

CGE's stock was up I franc at 330.90,

Ms. Hardy said Sir James's action means "he's obviously feeling restless. It looks like he's moving out of France." She said she doubted CGE would keep Sir James as the functional chairman.

An article in London's Sunday Times stated that Sir James had recently liquidated other assets in Britain and the United States, such as his 10 percent share of Aspinali Holdings PLC, which has gambling interests. It speculated that he was preparing "to move on to conquer another country.

Last year, Sir James failed in his takeover attempt for Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., but in the United States he also controls Crown Zellerbach Corp.'s forest products and cardboard operations. In Paris, Sibylle Savelli, an analyst with François Dufour-Kervern, said Sir James more likely sold his Trocadero holding to raise cash for another assault in the French media sector.

Du Pont Net Rose

10.5% in Quarter

WILMINGTON, Delaware —
Du Pont Co., the largest U.S. chemical group, reported Monday that earnings rose 10.5 percent in the second quarter, to $504 million, or $2.08 a share, from $456 million, or $1.88 a share a year earlier.

Revenue showed a 13 percent improvement, to $7.8 billion from $6.9 billion. For the first half, net

$6.9 billion. For the first half, net profit rose to $895 million, or $3.70

a share, from $860 million, or $3.55

a share, from Seou minion, of 33.55
a share, a year earlier.

The company's chairman, Richard E. Heckert, said the improvements were caused by further growth in the chemicals sector, while oil refining and distribution continued to show signs of weakness. He said he expected improvement in petroleum, reflecting the strengthening in crude oil prices.

Elsevier Increases Bid for Kluwer

the Dutch publisher, said Monday that it was raising its contested bid for Kluwer NV by 46.2 guilders to the equivalent of 444 guilders a share. The new bid values the rival publisher at 1.11 billion guilders (about $532 million).

Elsevier, the country's secondlargest publisher, embarked on a postile bid for Klower last month. It is competing for the publishing company against a third publisher, Wolters Samsom Groep NV Wolters has launched a merger bid with which Kluwer has agreed. As another line of defense, AMSTERDAM — Elsevier NV, confident the Wolters Samsom bid place. would succeed.

Last week, Elsevier said it had bought 30 percent of Khiwer's outstanding ordinary stock on the bourse.

At the same time, Wolters said it held 5 percent of Kluwer and could not afford to buy more on the open Wolters's offer values Kluwer at 433 guilders a share, 11 guilders below the new Elsevier offer.

The stakes are high in the takeover battle: If Elsevier wins, it will edge out VNU NV as the largest Kinwer has ensured voting rights in Dutch publisher. If Kinwer and the company through a preference Wolters Samsom merge, they will

Bof A Selling Investment Units

SAN FRANCISCO — BankAmerica Corp. said Monday that it will sell two subsidiaries -BA Investment Management Corp. and BA Investment Management international. It disclosed no terms.

The units, the second of which is based in London, will be sold to Monarch Capital Corp., based in Springfield, Massachusetts, and the subsidiaries' managers. BA Investment Management Corp. man-ages $10 billion in assets.

The bank holding company, which has been hit hard by lending losses, said the sales are part of its divestiture strategy. Analysts said the sale is unlikely to net nearly as much as the $77 million received from Wells Fargo & Co. for Bank America's consumer trust business.

Elders Adopts Outside Plan To Split Into 4 Companies

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches

MELBOURNE - Elders IXL Ltd., the diversified Australian company, said Monday that it had agreed in principle to restructuring proposals from AFP Investment Corp. that would split Elders into four new public companies.

On July 23, the Sydney-based AFP acquired options for 20 percent of Elders, saying it would exer-cise them upon the restructuring.

AFP had said a major reason for its move was the prospect of John D. Elliott, Elders chairman, entering federal politics, and the plan provides an incentive for him to delay his plans. The proposals would give senior management, particularly Mr. Elliott, increased equity participation in Elders through the options AFP purchased last week. His participation, however, would depend upon his staying as chairman for three years.

Elders said the proposals would benefit all shareholders through a more efficient structure. The plan would increase returns to shareholders, make valuation of the component assets easier and allow shareholders to vary investments among the different businesses.

Elders said the companies would be the Elders Brewing, Finance and Agri-business groups while a separate investment company would hold Elders's 18 percent stake in Broken Hill Pty., Australia's largest company. The first three would be majority-owned subsidiaries of El-ders, while Elders's share of the company owning the BHP stake would be less than 50 percent.

Each company would have a sep-arate board headed by Mr. Elliott.

Analysts said the Elders restructuring would boost its already sig-nificant cash reserves, unlock substantial funds in nonperforming assets and improve cash flow.

Analysts said the ability of each of the new companies to make a major acquisition would be virtually doubled under the new plan. (AFP, Reuters

You don't have to guess anymore. PIERS (Port Import/ Export Reporting Service) can supply you with the facts rapidly and accurately. Far better than if you were in the U.S.A. calling on importers yourself.

You see, ship manifests in America are public records. So The Journal of Commerce (New York) stations 150 reporters in 52 ports coast to coast who transcribe the details of every individual shipment entering or leaving the country. They include the identities of shipners and consignees, commodity descriptions and to grow 12.5 percent, to nearly 2.4 million, in 1987.

Carnival's growth led the indus-try. From 1983 to 1986, the compa-ny's average annual compounded growth rate was 28.5 percent, compared with an industry average of 12.7 percent. In that period, Camival's net income more than doubled, from $47.3 million to $97.7

But despite the company's attractive growth, the public share offering is being greeted on Wall Street with some of the same skepticism that Mr. Arison's shipbuilding plan faced nine years ago.

Analysts are concerned about the size of a special dividend to be paid to the Arison family, as well as about the possibility that cruise lines could be hurt by overbuilding. For Carnival's competitors, however, the company's move means greater visibility, and possibly more expansion.

"It's going to mean added recognition that the cruise business is a good business to invest in," said "In the end, it will just help us all." Despite the praise the company now gets even from some compentors, Carnival's entry into the cruise business was far from auspicious. Its first ship, the Mardi Gras, ran aground off the Bahamas on her maiden voyage with more than 300 travel agents aboard. But Mr. Arison demonstrated a talent for turning around his company. Since he emigrated from Israel in 1950, financial derring-do has been his trademark.

After the stock sale, Mr. Arison and his family, including his son trol of 82 percent of the outstanding stock and 90 percent of the voting stock. The offering makes Mr. Arison who has been on Forbes maga-zine's list of the 400 richest people in the United States for three years, considerably richer. Through a number of complex agreement, he and his family are to receive a large profit from the company's reorganization as it goes public, according to the company's prospectus.

Carnival officials cannot comment on the offering until it has

In one transaction, a dividend of approximately $129 million will be paid to the Arison family and others. Of that, $81 million will go to Mr. Arison. Part of that will be used to pay off a $36 million debt from a separate company Mr. Arison owns, Carnival Tours Inc., which in turn will be bought by Carnival Cruise Lines for $16.5 million.

Camival Cruise Lines will continue to make regular investments in certificates of deposit at Ensign Bank, based in New York, which is also owned by Mr. Arison. In February, Carnival held $10.3 million in principal of the bank's certificates of deposit.

The large amount of money that goes to the Arisons has raised some concerns about the offering analysts said.

"It's a very salable stock," said one analyst who spoke on the condition that he not be identified. "The company's got a good story. But the special dividend is a problem. It just doesn't look good."

Of more concern to many analysts is that the optimism expressed by Mr. Arison and some competitors may open the industry to overcapacity. According to the Cruise Line Industry Association, new ship construction by its members will result in the addition of an estimated 15,000 berths, a 26 percent increase, by 1990.

That fear may already be repre sented in the market performance of the other publicly traded cruise lines. Regency and American Cruise have both fallen from their peaks.

Conversion Option

Holders of the Debentures have the right under the Indentures, on or before the close of business on August 28, 1987. (1) to convert each $1,000 principal amount of the 6% Debentures business on August 28. 1987. (1) to convert each $1,000 principal amount of the 6% Debentures into (a) 26.3924 shares of Common Stock of CIGNA Corporation ("Common Stock") and (b) at such holder's election, either an additional 2.0626 shares of Common Stock or cash in the amount of $132.2355 and (2) to convert each $1,000 principal amount of the 834% Debentures into (a) 20.3190 shares of Common Stock and (b) at such holder's election, either an additional 1.5880 shares of Common Stock or cash in the amount of $101.8064.

The elections set forth in sections (1 kb) and (2 kb) shove arise from the redemption on July 13, 1987 of all of the $2.75 Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock ("Series A Stock") into which Debentures were formerly convertible. The Indentures provide that holders who elect the conversion option have the right to elect to receive either the Common Stock into which such Series A Stock was convertible at the conversion ratio of .42212 of a share of Common Stock for each share of Series A Stock that would have been received upon conversion prior to redemption of share of Series A Stock that would have been received upon conversion prior to redemption of the Series A Stock, or to receive cash equal to the redemption price he would have received if he had converted his Debentures into Series A Stock and then had such stock redeemed, without interest or dividends in either case.

In order to exercise the conversion privilege, holders of Debentures to be converted must surrender such Debentures with all unmatured coupons appertaining thereto at any of the offices of the Paying Agents specified above before the close of business on August 28, 1987. Debentures surrendered for conversion must be accompanied by written notice executed by the holder specifying that the holder elects to convert such Debentures and specifying whether he elects additional Common Stock or cash in place of the Series A Stock to which he would have been entitled prior to its redemption. Such notice must also state the name or names (with address and, in the case of U.S. persons, taxpayer identifying number) in which the certificates for shares of Common Stock are to be registered. No fractional shares of Common Stock will be issued upon conversion of Debentures, but in lieu thereof, the Company will pay a cash adjustment in respect of any such fractions in an amount equal to the same fraction of the closing price per share of the Common Stock on the business day on which the Debentures are surrendered for conversion. Upon surrender of Debentures for conversion as aforevaid, the rights of the holders of such Debentures as such holders shall cease.

of such Debentures as such holders shall cease. In accordance with the terms of the Indentures, no payment or adjustment will be made upon conversion for interest accrued on the Debentures or for any cash dividends on the shares of Common Stock issuable upon conversion.

Common Stock issuants upon conversion.

Please note that in order to effect conversion. Debentures must be in the physical possession of one of the Paying Agents not later than the close of business on August 28, 1987. Delivery of Debentures to any of the Paying Agents after the close of business on August 28, 1987, regardless of instructions in any conversion notice, will result only in payment of the Redemption Price and accrued interest to the Redemption Date as set forth above.

Operators failed to push the dollar up despite a 2.6 percent rise in second quarter U.S. gross national product in data released on Friday, compared with a market expectation of 2 percent. This showed that many were willing to sell," said Hirozomi Tanaka, chief of Dai-ichi change department. Takashi Kanagami, a manager at Mitsubishi Trust and Banking's international money market division, said some operators had begun to sell dollars on speculation that Japanese buying at the refunding will be light due to concern about currency risks and uncertainty over U.S. interest rates.

Mr. Tanaka said the rise in Japan's long-term prime rate announced on Friday is also likely to make local investors more reluctant to buy U.S. Treasury securities than at previous refundings, because it helped narrow the differential between U.S. and Japanese interest rates.

However, a dealer at a U.S. bank said that

Fears of protectionism initially used Japanese companies to establish manufacturing plants outside of Japan, but the rising yen has served as an additional incentive. Since the mid-1970s the Japanese have raised their direct invest-

THE Jamaica depicted in Michelle Cliff's mesmeating new novel is at once a place of britalizing poverty and astonishing beauty, a Babylon on the edge of destruction and another Eden, a demi-Paradise. Vestiges of the colomal "good life" (champagne suppers on treeshaded verandas, drunken parties by the pool with live bands) remain, but in the countryside many of the old estates are being reclaimed by the bush. Here the forest is slowly encrosching upon the genteel farmlands, eating away the remnants of civilization and, in the process, erasing some of its sms.

Elsewhere, squalor obtains, warping lives and expectations. Describing one shantytown on the outskirts of Kingston, Cliff writes. "A town of structures built by women and children. Structures made from packing crates which once housed Vauxhalls, Morris Minors, Renaults, Kelvinators, Frigidaires, Maytag washer-dryers. Found by a woman after an overseas shipment came in, discarded behind one of the big dealers downtown. Dragged by the woman and her children through the streets of Kingston, where they were noticed and ted upon."

Cliff, a Jamaican-American poet and novel-ist, quotes some lines of verse by Derek Wal-

Her people, like his, are divided souls, caught on the margins of different cultures, different worlds, and torn in their allegiances, between the polite hypocrisies of the past and the more vociferous imperatives of the feture. Whether to emigrate (to the United States to begin a new life; to England to rediscover a colonial inheritance) or to remain in Jameica and accept the island's destiny as one's own; whether to try to "pass" as white and reap the easy rewards of baving pale skin or to assert one's ethnic identity in the face of prejudice; whether to embrace the old class system or to cast one's lot with the dispossessed - these are the choices that confront the Savages, a muzedblood family that flees the rising violence on the island for the promises and deceptions of

As for the Savages' eldest daughter, Clare, she too will become a spiritual exile, a wanderer between cultures. Brought up in Brooklys. she floats through high school and college "not feeling much of anything, except a vague dread that she belongs nowhere."

The most powerful parts of this novel are those in which Cliff addresses the larger dual-ities (between white and black, colonialism and revolution, the United States and the thirdworld) by indirection, spinning less a political parable than a myth of history and identity.

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches CHICAGO - When Richard Dotson struck out Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees to open the eighth inning Sunday, he had a 2-0 lead and was five outs away from pitching a perfect game.

Dotson won 22 games in 1983 when he was only 24 years old but the key man on a young staff that helped the Chicago White Sox win 99 games that season. Then the big right-hander began struggling with arm and chest ailments that required surgery, and the White Sox, too, fell on hard times.

Sunday, after two years of ago-ny, he was in a position to recaptune the glory days. Then fate inter-thed, and Dotson not only didn't get a perfect game, he lost, 5-2.

After striking our Winfield, he got two strikes on Mike Paglianulo, who asked plate umpire Greg Kosc to check the baseball. Kosc did, returned it to the pitcher, and the crowd cheered again. Pagliarulo fouled back a pitch, took a ball, then lined a single over second baseman Fred Mannique's outstretched glove, ending the string of outs at 22.

Mike Easler doubled down the right-field line. And Dotson became the loser when, with two out, Dan Pasqua, a .199 hitter, clubbed a three-run homer. It was only Pasqua's fourth hit in 17 at-bats since being recalled from the minors.

It mattered not that the Yankees made certain they ended their fourgame losing streak when Gary Ward and Winfield homered in the ninth to chase Dotson; Pasqua already had broken his heart.

"Well, I guess I didn't have that good of stuff," he said. "I gave up five runs and we only got two. I stiched pretty well early but made couple of bad pitches with the

"I wasn't really thinking about a no-hitter. You can't do that when you're only ahead 2-zip.'

There have been 13 perfect games in major league history, the last by Mike Witt of the California Àngels on Sept. 30, 1984.

Before the first Yankee hit, Dotson went to three balls just twice, against Winfield in the fifth inning and Bobby Meacham in the sixth. Dotson had help from two outstanding plays in the second in-ning, the first when Winfield d a ball over Dotson thatt Ozzie Guillen, rushing in from shortstop, grabbed with his bare hand and threw out Winfield.

Two batters later, Mike Easler hit a line drive to the right side, but Greg Walker dived to his right to make the catch:

Walker also reached out to grab making the catch.

That brought up Don Mattingly, game ended. The fans he second leading hitter in the league. Suddenly the crowd of outside Derk 22,762, which had been surprisingly subdued, became more involved. When Dotson forced Mattingly to hit a roller to the right side of the infield, then beat him to first base as he took the throw from Walker, the crowd of 22,762 stood and cheered. It cheered every pitch until Pagliarulo hit a high change up for the single

Becker Beats Mayotte in Another Cup Cliff-Hanger By John Feinstein

Washington Post Service
HARTFORD, Connecticut — It came down to Tim Mayotte to save the United States from relegation Sunday night to the backwaters of Davis Cup competition, to conquer Boris Becker and complete the comeback that John McEnroe had made possible earlier in the day.

Mayotte almost did so, in a fiveset confrontation that Becker, emerging with a 6-2, 6-3, 5-7, 4-6, 6-2 victory, called "the most difficult match of my life."

It gave his team a 3-2 triumph in the weekend's best-of-five series and preserved West Germany's place in Ward and Winfield homered in the ninth, Dotson was replaced by Ray Searage. Mayotte, miraculously, had came set. He was playing in an emotional daze, carried by the spectators, by his teammates, by the circum-stances. And yet, deep inside as the fifth set began, he knew that the jagged edge was self-created, the result of his loss Friday to Eric Jelen. But McEnroe had beaten Jelen, 7-5, 6-2, 6-1, in Sunday's opening singles, making the series score 2-2. And as soon as he had punched one last crosscourt forehand past Jelen.

and easily put away Mayotte's desperation return. Two more serves and he was out of the game and, as it turned out, out of trouble. "After that," Becker said, "I felt sure I would win the match."

All the adrenalin seemed to go out of Mayotte then. The chance had been there, and gone. Becker drilled a forehand return, then another for 0-30. Mayotte came up with an ace, but netted a backhand. At 15-40, Becker chipped a backhand return and Mayotte's halfvolley hit the net tape.

Becker was jumping, screaming, heard clearly in the suddenly quiet building. It was over soon after, with another break and another backhand return. Overjoyed. Becker hurled his racket high into the stands and jumped into the arms of his cheering, relieved, teammates.

His racket, he was told, had hit Pauline Morreen, an elderly spectator from Hancock, New Hampshire, on the head. She was shaken, but uncut. Becker came into the stands, apologized and invited Morreen and her husband to be his guests at the U.S. Open in September.

It is only when they try to bankrupt me $8.50." that I feel I should speak out. If my situation is duplicated around the country, every father who has a daughter between the ages of 4 and 12 is going to have to apply for relief. This is what happened.

Our 7-yearold daughter requested, four months ago. a Buchwald

Barbie doll. Now, as as far as I'm concerned, one doll is just like another, and since the Barbie doll cost only $10.95 I was happy to oblige. We brought the doll home and I thought nothing more of it until a week later my daughter came in and said, "Barbie needs a negli-

"So does your mother," I replied. But there is one in the catalogue for only $10," she cried. "What catalogue?"

The one that came with the

I grabbed the catalogue, and much to my horror discovered what the sellers of Barbie were up to. They let you have the doll for $10.95, but you have to buy clothes for her at an average of $12 each. They have about 200 outfits, from ice-skating skirts to mink jackets, and a girl's status in the community is based on how many Barbie clothes she has for her doll. The first time I took my daughter to the store I spent $20 on a dress Agence France Press. BEIJING The Chinese government has spent almost 20 million yuan (about $5.4 million) on the restoration of about 20 Buddhist monasteries and temples in Oinghai province that were destroved or damaged during the 1966-76 cultural revolution, the New China News Agency said.

A week later my daughter came

"So let her be an airline steward-

I gave her $8,50. Barbie didn't stay a stewardess long. She decided she wanted to be a nurse ($8), then a singer in a nightclub ($15), then a professional dancer ($12).

One day, my daughter walked in and said, "Barbie's lonely." "Let her join a sorority," I said. 'She wants Ken.'

"Who is Ken?" She showed me the catalogue. Sure enough, there was a doll named Ken, the same size as Barbic, with crew-cut hair, a vinyl plastic chest and movable arms and "If you don't get Ken," my daughter cried. "Barble will grow up to be an old maid."

So we went out and bought Ken ($11.95). Ken needed a tuxedo ($18.95), a raincoat ($9), a terrycloth robe and an electric razor ($9), tennis togs ($6), pajamas ($5) and several single-breasted suits

Pretty soon we had put up $600 to protect our original $10.95 in-

Then one evening my daughter came in with a shocker. "Barbie and Ken are getting married."
"Who's paying for the wedding?"

"They'll need a house to live in. Here's Barbie's dream house." "Thirty-seven ninety-five?" shouted. "Why can't they live on a shelf like the rest of your dolls? The tears started to flow. "They want to live together as man and Well, Barbie and Ken are now happily married and living in their dream house with $3,000 worth of clothes hanging in the closet. I wish l could say that all was well, but yesterday my daughter announced that Midge ($10.95), put out by the same toy firm, is coming to visit them. And she doesn't have a thing

While on vacation Art Buchwald received limited immunity, and the special prosecutor has allowed him to reprint some of his favorite columns.

Marketing the 'English Season'

By Francis X. Clines

E GHAM. England — It took a few thousand years, but polo is now a busy new venue for social climbing in Britain, complete with "castle creepers" social overreachers - and handsome, mercenary athletes racing past a pop-culture mélange that was displayed Sunday like designer daffodils along the borders of the greensward.

Everyone from the queen to the Bee Gees was being ogled between chukkers by some of the maliet on ball and made a fashionable day in the country of watching top-quality, high-goal

"The people," said Alain D. Perrin, the head of Cartier, the jeweler and sponsor of the international polo day whose crowds have increased tenfold in recent years. "The 'beautiful people," he amended in describing his company's deliberate engineering of what is becoming a major event of the phenomenon known as the English Season. "We took a marketing way of treating this event," he said, proud of this grafting of old Raj and new glitz. Perrin made it seem a chef's art, whisking together rock music and movie personalities, business executives who like champagne tent parties for impressing people, and batches of news media gadflies and publicists flown in gratis to stir in some hyperbole. He conceded the celebrity broth already had some strong stock in the modern royal family's support for polo. But mixing in the Bee Gees - all three Bee Gees, it was emphasized - and

and numerous other such public people is what makes for the modern social idyll of the English

The polo seemed vivid and excellent, particularly the opening contest between teams of some of the best players from North America and England, Thunder-ous, dangerous dashes and buffelings by keen ponies and muscular riders underpinned precision turnings and passes worthy of ice hockey. On the side-but more often there was light talk of this and that.

"We must do something together!" one Cartier guest was instructed by an easily overheard Christopher Biggens, a bearing star of British children's television, outside one of the seven long white hospitality tents. There, amid a bandstand rendition of "Sunrise, Sunset," the privileged guests of the old polo clubs and the new corporations drew sustenance for the matches from fancy meals and cream teas. You save the best horses for the last chukker," said Eduardo Martinez, a quiet-spoken Ecuadorean who remained off to the side, tending one of the string of eight ponies that a top player needs for a match. He correctly lines, there was some talk of that, bet $10 on the North American team, respectful of such a prodigy as Mike Azzaro, 21, described as "the Chicago Kid" by the match announcer, who made the contest of power, speed and finesse sound more like a wrestling

The day, known as the Cartier International for the last five years, comes tucked amid such hard-to-get social tickets as the queen's Buckingham Palace garden parties and the Glyndebourne opera festival, as well as more open events such as Henley. Regatta. These are all scheduled stops in England's long meandering season of fancy-dress gamboling and celebrity watching that seems to grow as an ethereal, loppish substitute for empire. Polo originated in ancient Persia and was revived through the family.

In the last decade it has evolved here from a casual affair for moneyed families to a full-fledged, publicity-steeped event.

"There's lots of aggression, it's very masculine and the men look fabulous," said Sue Ferguson, wife of the "Major God" of English polo, Major Ronald Fergu-son, He is the father of the Duchess of York, better known to the many commoners in the crowd as Fergie." From walkie-talkie and motorcycle, the major directed Sunday's events as polo manager for Charles, the Prince of Wales, who scored a goal as his future subjects cheered.

Some of the best players now come from South America and Mexico, hired for salaries in excess of $100,000 to make instant contenders of clubs with international ambitions. They pose and chat with the modern commoner stars of cricket.

Prince Philip was one of the chief patrons of the game even before it made its surge as a celebrity witness event. His son, Prince Charles, played before his mother, Queen Elizabeth, in the day's final match here on the impecta ble Guards Polo Club grounds south of Windsor Castle.

"This is one event of the year that is a guaranteed royal occasion." Perrin said. Receipts were going to the support of polo, in-cluding the training of the young generation.

The crowd, thick with comoner families who came in at $20 a carload and high-society groups up in the pricier seats, waited for what some call The Kiss, the one the Princess of Wales bestows on the overheated lips of her husband, Prince Charles, after his final chukker of play.

"Every bit as glamorous as a Glyndebourne audience, yet subtly less intelligent and more moneyed." is the contentious verdict on Windsor polo of Godfrey Smith, ranking social arbiter. He is an expert on the "castle creep-ers" and other denizens of the thriving English Season. This assortment of gatherings stretches from rugby at Twickenham in January to the shire fox hunts in December. Next comes croquet at Hurlingham, minus the royal
